WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

ELAINE MCCALLIG, REPORTER

Your phone buzzes. But wait ... it's a number that isn't saved on your phone. Could it be a recruiter for that dream job you applied for on LinkedIn? In this instance for me, it wasn't. Instead, it was a prerecorded message from an elderly lady inviting me to press 1 to avail of "urgent prayer" in dulcet tones. Needless to say, I was slightly bemused. Although "urgent prayer" won't remedy the scourge of robocalls, turn to page 6 or visit metro.us to check out our definitive guide to eliminating robocalls — once and for all.

KATE SPADE SUFFERED DEPRESSION: HUSBAND

1 The husband of fashion designer Kate Spade on Wednesday broke his silence on her death, saying she suffered from depression for years and that the couple had been living separately for 10 months. Andy Spade said in a lengthy statement to The New York Times that he and his teenaged daughter Bea were "devastated by her loss, and can't even begin to fathom life without her." Kate Spade, who with her husband built a fashion empire on the popularity of her colorful handbags, was found dead in her New York City apartment on Tuesday, an apparent suicide. She was 55. Andy Spade said that his wife suffered from depression and anxiety for many years but there was "no indication and no warning that she would do this. It was a complete shock." "She was actively seeking help for depression and anxiety over the last five years, seeing a doctor on a regular basis and taking medication for both depression and anxiety. There was no substance or alcohol abuse. There were no business problems," he said in his statement.

GIULIANI: INVESTIGATORS TRYING TO FRAME TRUMP

2 Donald Trump's attorney, Rudy Giuliani, on Wednesday said U.S. special counsel Robert Mueller's office was trying to frame the president in its investigation of Russia's role in the 2016 U.S. election. "They are a group of 13 highly partisan Democrats that make up the Mueller team, excluding him, [who] are trying very, very hard to frame him, to get him in trouble, when he hasn't done anything wrong," Giuliani said at a question-and-answer session at the Globes capital markets conference in Tel Aviv. In fact, there are 17 staff members in Mueller's special prosecutor's office. Thirteen are registered Democrats; four are either unaffiliated or their affiliation is unknown, according to the Washington Post. Mueller himself is a registered Republican, as is Rod Rosenstein, the deputy attorney general who appointed him. Mueller is investigating whether Russia meddled in the 2016 election and whether Trump's campaign colluded with Moscow. Criminal charges have been brought against Trump campaign aides, including former campaign chairman Paul Manafort.

ACTIVISTS IN NEW YORK DEMONSTRATE AGAINST EPA CHIEF SCOTT PRUITT

3 Protestors rally against Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Administrator Scott Pruitt outside the federal office building that houses the New York City office of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Wednesday in New York City. Pruitt is under fire again this week after emails showed he asked an EPA staff member to contact Chick-fil-A for potential business opportunities for his wife. Federal ethics rules prohibit government employees from using their positions for private gain and prohibit supervisors from directing subordinates to carry out personal errands. Earlier in the week it was also disclosed that Pruitt asked an aide to inquire with the Trump International Hotel about purchasing a used mattress.

FACEBOOK GRILLED OVER CHINESE DATA SHARING

4 Facebook Inc. faced criticism on Wednesday from Republican and Democratic U.S. lawmakers who demanded that the social media company be more forthcoming about data it has shared with four Chinese firms. The bipartisan criticism reflected rising frustration in Congress about how Facebook protects the privacy of the more than two billion people who use its services worldwide. The leaders of the U.S. House of Representatives Energy and Commerce Committee accused Facebook Chief Executive Officer Mark Zuckerberg of failing to disclose the company's agreements with the Chinese firms when he appeared before them in April and testified about Facebook's sharing of users' personal information with third parties. "Clearly, the company's partnerships with Chinese technology companies and others should have been disclosed before Congress and the American people," the panel's Republican chairman, Greg Walden, and top Democrat Frank Pallone said in a statement. "We strongly encourage full transparency from Facebook and the entire tech community."

CALIF. JUDGE REMOVED OVER RAPE SENTENCING

5 Californians voted in a special election to unseat a state judge who drew worldwide condemnation for giving a six-month jail sentence to a Stanford University swimmer convicted of sexually assaulting an unconscious woman. Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Aaron Persky, a former prosecutor appointed to the bench in 2003 by then-Gov. Gray Davis next month will become the first sitting judge recalled in more than 80 years in the state. In Tuesday's election, 60 percent of the more than 176,058 voters who cast ballots approved a petition to recall Persky, according to unofficial results posted online by the county registrar. The registrar is expected to certify the results on July 5, spokesman Steven Spivak said. "There is no such thing as an elected official who [is] independent of the electorate. That is not a thing," Michele Dauber, a Stanford law professor who organized the recall petition, wrote in a Twitter message on Wednesday. Persky came under fire in June 2016 for sentencing Brock Turner, then 20, to six months in the county jail and three years probation for three counts of sexual assault.

Americans get about 2.5 billion robocalls each month, according to the FCC. GETTY IMAGES

Robocalls are the worst, and the fight is just beginning

They're annoying, they're relentless — but they're not unavoidable. Here's what you can do to take a stand against the scourge.

ELAINE MCCALLIG
letters@metro.us

In our technologically driven society, robocalls truly are a modern plague.

The Federal Trade Commission has reported a colossal increase in the number of robocall complaints; skyrocketing to 4.5 million in 2017 from 1.7 million complaints in 2014. But those are just the calls that are reported. The Federal Communications Commission estimates that U.S. consumers get nearly 2.5 billion monthly robocalls — automated, prerecorded calls that regulators have labeled a "scourge," according to FCC estimates.

YouMail, a company that blocks robocalls and tracks them, estimated that 3.4 billion robocalls were placed in April in the United States, an all-time high.

Last month, New York state Sen. Brad Hoylman put forth legislation that would ban robocalling without the receiver's prior consent. The proposed legislation would also require phone companies to offer consumers call-blocking technology free of charge.

New York is one of the most severely impacted regions in the U.S. for robocalls, with the 917 area code ranking the fifth worst in the nation for these irritating calls, according to YouMail.

By employing a crafty tactic that tricks you into thinking the caller is local, telemarketers are now reaching more people than ever — but, there are ways to eradicate robocalls.

According to the FTC, "neighbor spoofing" is the newest way telemarketers and robocallers are manipulating you into taking their call. There is widely available technology that allows robocallers to hijack whichever telephone number they like, and use it to spam unwitting consumers.

"Like so many New Yorkers, everyone in my family has been annoyed by robocalls on a near daily basis."
Sen. Hoylman

Another way telemarketers engage in neighbor spoofing is to license and purchase large quantities of telephone numbers they can use to make calls. This is legal so long as the numbers used redirect back to the company's sales department.

The crazy case of a "kingpin" robocaller

The Federal Communications Commission last month voted to issue a $120 million fine to a Florida man alleged to have made almost 100 million robocalls to trick consumers with "exclusive" vacation deals from well-known travel and hospitality companies.

4.5M

The Federal Trade Commission has reported a colossal increase in the number of robocall complaints — they've skyrocketed to 4.5 million in 2017 from 1.7 million in 2014.

In 2017, the FCC alleged that Adrian Abramovich made 96 million robocalls during a three-month period in 2016. In April, he told a Senate panel that he was "not the kingpin of robocalling that is alleged." Consumers who answered the calls were transferred to foreign call centers that tried to sell vacation packages, often involving timeshares. The FCC said the calls violated U.S. telecommunications laws.

Last year, the most common robocalls infecting telephones across the U.S. included debt reduction services, vacation and timeshare deals, and warranties and protection plans, according to the FTC.

"Like so many New Yorkers, everyone in my family has been annoyed by robocalls on a near-daily basis," Sen. Hoylman said in a statement.

"These robocalls are a scourge on the public-at-large, and my constituents have been vocal about the extent to which these calls infringe on their privacy and interrupt their daily lives."

"Enough is enough."

Reuters contributed to this report.

HOW CAN YOU GET RID OF ROBOCALLS?

The FTC has shared four pieces of advice for Metro readers who are fed up with these pesky calls.

1. Register for the Do Not Call Registry
Signing up to the Do Not Call Registry lets legitimate companies know that you're not interested in receiving any more telemarketing live calls and robocalls. As telemarketers must review their call list every 31 days, you should be free of these calls from legitimate companies in no time.

To sign up, log on to donotcall.gov or call their toll-free number on 888-382-1222 from the number you'd like to register.

2. Report unwanted calls
Communicating any unwanted calls to donotcall.gov allows the FTC to track the worst violators and keep an eye out for any patterns that may emerge.

3. Hang up
If you're already registered on the Do Not Call Registry and you get a sales call, simply hang up. As legitimate companies must heed the rules of the registry, any sales calls you receive after 31 days of being registered are more than likely illegal.

4. Download call -blocking apps
There are dozens of quality call blocking apps available on Apple's App Store or on Google Play. For landlines, reach out to your telephone provider to discuss how you can enable a call blocking feature to fend against robocalls.

Building collapse memorial opens day after contractor killed

The June 5, 2013 building collapse at 22nd and Market is now honored by a permanent memorial park.

A memorial park on the site of a former Salvation Army store crushed by a falling wall from a nearby demolition officially opened this week. But safety issues highlighted by the collapse that killed seven and injured a dozen remain urgent, with a local contractor killed by a falling wall just one day earlier.

"Today we honor their memory by promising to never ever forget the lessons that this memorial teaches," Mayor Jim Kenney said at the unveiling of the memorial on June 5. "By never putting profit ahead of people, by insisting that construction projects be conducted safely, by making that 911 call when we see danger, by making safety our highest priority always."

The June 5, 2013 collapse at 22nd and Market of a former Hoagie City shop under demolition to be converted into a parking lot onto the adjacent Salvation Army remains one of Philadelphia's most shocking public tragedies of recent years.

The company of the developer paying for the demolition, the late Richard Basciano, and the Salvation Army, were ordered to pay $227 million to the victims in a landmark civil lawsuit over the tragedy.

"On a beautiful late spring morning in 2013, the reckless demolition of a neighboring building collapsed a wall onto the Salvation Army that stood on this site," reads an inscription on the new memorial. "This memorial park is dedicated to the memory the six people who died here on June 5, 2013. They were from all walks of life, and each was uniquely precious to their family, friends and community. ... It challenges the residents and leaders of Philadelphia to remember what happened here and to always value human life above development."

General contractor Griffin Campbell was convicted by a jury of causing the deaths in the collapse and got 30 years. Backhoe operator Sean Benschop pleaded guilty and got 15 years. The company of the developer paying for the demolition, the late Richard Basciano, and the Salvation Army, were ordered to pay $227 million to the victims in a landmark civil lawsuit over the tragedy.

"Today we honor their memory by promising to never ever forget the lessons that this memorial teaches."
Mayor Kenney

After the collapse, family of victims learned that there was talk of converting the site into a parking lot, and they organized to turn it into a memorial. Businesses, citizens, building trade unions and others raised $1.3 million for the project with a $100,000 endowment for its upkeep.

The memorial was unveiled just a day after two workers were trapped under a collapsing wall inside a site they were demolishing in rapidly-gentrifying Brewerytown. Contractor Harvey Figgs, 59, died as a result of injuries suffered when a brick wall fell on him around 11 a.m. on June 4.

The historic building they were demolishing at 26th and Jefferson had been deemed dangerous and structurally compromised by Licenses & Inspections in May 2017, NBC10 reported. It got a demolition permit in February saying it must be demolished by hand, which is what Figgs was undertaking at the time of his death.

Philly beats Trump again, wins sanctuary city suit

President Donald Trump's move to punish Philadelphia for its "sanctuary city" policies was knocked by a federal judge Wednesday, marking another tangle with the president from which Philadelphia emerged the victor.

U.S. District Judge Michael Baylson of Philly federal court ruled the Trump administration and U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions could not constitutionally deprive Philadelphia of the Byrne Justice Assistant Grant (JAG), worth a few million dollars annually for police and public-safety funding, in punishment for its sanctuary-city policy under which local police do not cooperate with federal immigration authorities.

"This is an important moment for all Philadelphians, especially our immigrant community," Mayor Jim Kenney said in a statement after the judge's decision was announced Wednesday. "Judge Baylson's ruling is a total and complete victory for the city. It prevents a White House run by a bully from bullying Philadelphia into changing its policies. It is a ruling that should make clear to Attorney General Sessions that federal grant dollars cannot be used for a political shakedown."

In November 2017, Baylson issued a temporary restraining order stopping Trump and Sessions from blocking the grant, which was explicitly intended as a punishment of city leaders like Kenney, who staunchly stood by sanctuary city policies despite pressure and harsh rhetoric on immigrants from Trump.

"The judge has determined that the attorney general, for multiple reasons, violated the Constitution and unlawfully attached conditions to the City's 2017 Byrne JAG grant application related to the city's policies regarding immigrants residing in Philadelphia," said City Solicitor Marcel Pratt in a statement.

The funding from the JAG grant goes toward funding things like "police overtime, equipment enhancements, upgrades to courtroom technology, training for law enforcement, and alternative programming for low-level offenders," according to the city.

Philadelphia sued the federal government after new conditions were attached to the grant, including that Philadelphia "certify compliance with Section 1373 of Title 8 of the U.S. Code," give ICE 48 hours' notice before prisoners of interest were released, and allowing ICE "unfettered access to interview inmates in Philadelphia's prison system," according to a city press release.

> "This is an important moment for all Philadelphians, especially our immigrant community."
> Mayor Jim Kenney

"Philadelphians, including the immigrant community, will be greatly relieved and heartened by this ruling," said Miriam Enriquez, Philadelphia's director of the Office of Immigrant Affairs, in a statement. "This should reaffirm to our immigrant communities that we are glad you are here, we want you here, and we will always fight to ensure that Philadelphia remains a welcoming city to all."

But while Philly may have won the battle, the war is far from over. ICE has stepped up arrests of illegal immigrants in the Philadelphia area partly in response to its sanctuary city status, and in a one-week raid in May, arrested 49 people, 14 of whom had been previously arrested by local police and released from custody despite ICE detainers holds being placed against them. Trump commutes sentence of drug offender, examining dozens more potential pardons

Johnson's release came following the president's meeting last week with celebrity Kim Kardashian West.

"He takes them seriously because they impact people's lives."

President Donald Trump on Wednesday commuted the life sentence of Alice Marie Johnson, who had served more than 20 years in prison on a first-time drug offense, and is prepared to use his constitutional clemency powers to give relief to dozens more offenders, a White House source said.

Johnson's cause had been taken up by celebrity Kim Kardashian West, who personally lobbied Trump on her behalf last week.

A White House official familiar with the clemency process said that Trump continues to examine the cases of people who he believes have been victims of the criminal justice system.

Trump last week pardoned conservative commentator and filmmaker Dinesh D'Souza, convicted of making illegal campaign contributions, and has recently granted pardons to the late heavyweight boxer Jack Johnson, controversial former Arizona Sheriff Joe Arpaio, and Lewis "Scooter" Libby, a former top aide to then-Vice President Dick Cheney.

The president is still considering pardoning lifestyle maven Martha Stewart, who was convicted in an insider trading case, and commuting the sentence of former Illinois Governor Rod Blagojevich, currently serving a 14-year prison sentence on felony corruption charges, along with several others, the White House official told Reuters.

Stewart and Blagojevich both have ties to Trump's former "Apprentice" TV shows, but the White House has denied that Trump is only considering pardons for well-known figures and that he is examining several other cases that are less notorious.

"He's looking at all those seriously," Hogan Gidley, a White House

Alice Marie Johnson, a 63-year-old from Tennessee, has already served more than 20 years in prison on drug conspiracy and money laundering charges. In a statement on the commutation of her sentence, White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders said Johnson "has been a model prisoner over the past two decades."

THE FOREMAN FORECAST: THE PRESIDENT'S PERILOUS DEFENSE

ANALYSIS

TOM FOREMAN

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

Think of them as political landmines; all those lies, misleading statements, and threats President Trump is spreading around the White House in response to the Russia probe. Sure, they can keep his enemies confused, jumpy, and afraid, but they can also represent a significant peril to the person who put them there. And this week, Team Trump laid down a couple of particularly tricky ones.

First, he insisted that the appointment of special counsel Robert Mueller is "UNCONSTITUTIONAL!" adding "Despite that, we play the game because I … have done nothing wrong!" This is an odd assertion. In one sentence he wants to expose a wrong, and in the next he wants to excuse himself from doing anything about it. One could argue if any president sees unconstitutional behavior he is legally bound to take action because the failure to do so is a dereliction of duty.

Second, he insisted, "I have the absolute right to PARDON myself…" Again, this is a weird sort of double trap. If he's done nothing wrong, why is he even bringing this up? And if he were to self-pardon, and if Congressional lawmakers disagreed with his decision to do so (two big "ifs" to be sure) the possibility of impeachment grows rapidly.

All of this spurred yet another round of surrealist questioning at the daily White House briefing, with Press Secretary Sarah Sanders simultaneously saying the president is "certainly not" above the law, yet offering no clarification as to why he is saying …um … well, he's above the law.

How long until one of President Trump's "political landmines" blows up? GETTY IMAGES

There is no doubt that Trump wants his challengers to back off. He's tired of hearing about Russia. He resents efforts to hold his team accountable. And he wants to build public belief that, no matter what, he will come out on top. And maybe he will. But the law has a way of keeping track of such things. And each time he fires up Twitter to lay more of those mines in the rose garden for his foes, you know his legal team has to be wondering if the president, or his minions or even they will accidentally trip one with calamitous results.

Taiwanese student hit with federal charges in US school threat

A Taiwanese exchange student who already pleaded guilty in state court to making shooting threats against the Catholic high school he was attending in Pennsylvania has now been hit with federal firearms charges, U.S. prosecutors said on Wednesday.

An-Tso "Edward" Sun, 18, was charged in a federal criminal complaint issued on Tuesday with possessing ammunition while in the United States on a nonimmigrant visa, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Justice said in a statement.

Sun was sentenced earlier this week to between four and 23 months in jail followed by deportation after pleading guilty in Delaware County District court to making terroristic threats.

He faces a maximum of 10 years in prison if convicted on the federal charges.

An-Tso Sun UD POLICE TWITTER

An attorney for Sun could not be reached for comment by Reuters on Wednesday afternoon.

Prosecutors say Sun, a Taiwanese national who was living with an American host family while studying at a high school in Upper Darby, Pennsylvania, told another student in March that he should stay home on May 1 because "I'm going to come here armed and shoot up the school. Just kidding."

Sun's classmate, who has not been identified by authorities, reported the remark to school officials, who notified the Upper Darby Police Department.

Investigators recovered a semiautomatic pistol, more than 1,000 rounds of ammunition, a crossbow and ballistic suit from Sun's bedroom and a duffel bag of his belongings given by his host mother to an attorney she retained for him.

"Thanks to the tremendous work of our local, state, and federal partners, a potential school tragedy was prevented," Marlon Miller, special agent in charge of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security Investigations Philadelphia Field Office.

What role will Dennis Rodman have at the Singapore summit?

The former NBA star, a friend to both Trump and Kim Jong-Un, wants to attend.

letters@metro.us

It sounds like a bizarro Disney movie, but it is reality: As recently as March, the only person who'd ever met both President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong-Un was flame-tressed, nasally pierced former NBA star Dennis Rodman.

Now, the president is having an unprecedented face-to-face meeting with Kim in Singapore on June 12. Naturally, Rodman is planning to come along.

Will he be at the negotiating table? The White House press corps wondered. Will he attend as a singular ego-to-ego translator, greasing the way for nuclear détente?

If Rodman goes, which is not certain, he will be there to promote a product called PotCoin, a "community-based cryptocurrency for legalized marijuana," reported Trey Yingst, White House correspondent for One America News Network, yesterday.

"Crazy Dennis Rodman is saying I wanted to go to North Korea with him. Never discussed, no interest, last place on Earth I want to go to."
Donald Trump, in a tweet

"A lot of times in situations that involve complex diplomacy, countries like to identify ambassadors of goodwill, and whether you agree with it or not, Dennis Rodman fits the bill," a "source close to Rodman" told the New York Post. The former "Celebrity Apprentice" star and longtime Kim friend "could even play some sort of role in the negotiations," the paper said.

Rodman has been visiting Kim since 2013, practicing what he called "basketball diplomacy." The two bonded over the North Korean leader's love of hoops. But U.S. officials distanced the government from Rodman's trips, and he was roundly criticized for hanging with Kim instead of pushing to have American hostages released.

Dennis Rodman in North Korea REUTERS

Sitting U.S. presidents have refused to meet directly with Kim so as not to legitimize his brutal, belligerent regime.

After a 2013 visit, Rodman suggested that he and Trump (then just the "Apprentice" host) return to North Korea to meet with Kim. In May 2014, Rodman told DuJour magazine that Trump "wanted to go. He wanted to give me his plane to go over there. Then all of sudden he started to get all weird and s—."

Trump replied via tweet: "Crazy Dennis Rodman is saying I wanted to go to North Korea with him. Never discussed, no interest, last place on Earth I want to go to."

Then he tweeted a follow-up: "Dennis Rodman was either drunk or on drugs [delusional] when he said I wanted to go to North Korea with him. Glad I fired him on Apprentice!"

But Rodman persisted. On his last trip to see Kim in December 2017, he presented North Korean leadership with a copy of Trump's 1987 book "The Art of the Deal." In December, he asked Trump to send him to North Korea as a peace envoy. He told Agence France-Presse that Trump and Kim are "pretty much the same people. ... They love control. Ain't nobody got no finger on the button."

On Tuesday, Darren Prince, a spokesman for Rodman, told the Post that the trip hadn't been confirmed but he'd be happy to go if needed.

Trump and Kim are scheduled to meet at Singapore's luxury Sentosa Resort on June 12 at 9 a.m. Singapore time, or June 11 at 9 p.m. New York time.

Rescuers tirelessly search for 200 missing near Guatemala volcano

GETTY IMAGES

Rescuers scoured a lava and ash ravaged landscape in Guatemala for a third straight day on Wednesday in search of survivors and victims of Fuego volcano's calamitous eruption, which has left an estimated 85 people dead and some 200 missing.

Volcan de Fuego, which means "Volcano of Fire," exploded violently on Sunday, shooting thick plumes of ash miles into the sky that rained down on residents and sending superheated pyroclastic and lava flows barreling through nearby towns.

A thick layer of still smoldering ash and volcanic rock blanketed the tiny hamlet of San Miguel Los Lotes, with only the roofs of some homes sticking out.

Guatemala's seismological, volcanic and meteorological institute Insivumeh heightened its warnings after the volcano erupted again on Tuesday, forcing evacuations and sending rescue workers scrambling for cover.

But by Wednesday morning, rescuer workers were back at it with pickaxes, metal rods and flashlights in hand, risking their own lives in search of victims or a miracle survivor. Bulldozers stood by to help.

"We can only work in places where we can stand on the roofs of houses ... because the ash is very hot. There are places where you stick the pickaxe or rod in and we see a lot of smoke coming out and fire and it's impossible to keep digging because we could die," said 25-year-old rescuer Diego Lorenzana.

Elsewhere, rescuers plunged metal rods into the quickly hardening ash that sat atop what was previously a roadway in a desperate search for trapped vehicles, a video by local TV station Televisiete showed.

The extent of the devastation was widespread.

Cecilio Chacaj, a spokesman for the municipal firefighters department, said the bodies of another nine victims have been recovered on Wednesday. REUTERS

GRUMBLE WINNERS:

The time has come to announce this week's round of Grumble winners! Each winner will receive a $25 Amazon gift card from Metro as a token of appreciation for your thoughts on what vexes you the most. We will be honoring these Grumble Hall of Famers every week, so make sure to keep sending us your messages of disdain for the little things in life that really grind your gears. Metro salutes the following Grumblers!

1 Jane Supcariova for her passionate rant on how people should shape up and offer their seat on the subway to people who deserve them.

2 Fredrick Beondo and his mission statement against messy recycling rummagers.

3 Steven Brinberg and his case against people who spray him with water while washing the sidewalk and for coming up with the classic catch phrase "I'M NOT A TOWEL." You certainly are not, Steve. You're a winner!

4 John Elari for his call to action for Grumble readers to submit more serious Grumbles. We've got work to do, Grumblers!

5 And last but not least, Brenda Miles and her Grumble about people who take up space with strollers on public transit.

READER RESPONSES:

LANDSCAPERS BLOWING DEBRIS AT PEOPLE ON THE STREET

Have you ever been a victim of grass and debris blown onto you by guys using powerful mowers and blowers? Where is the courtesy and plain decency by these people? Some of them use these tools as weapons. We need to report such cases of disrespect to the landscape company and the building management where they are working. Evaluations and ongoing training are in order. The employees' behavior in the street is representative of the companies that employ them. They need to get rid of the blowers. That dirt and whatever else they kick up with it sticks to your body. They blow dirt up on the underside of our cars. There doesn't seem to be a reason to do that. Some of the men do show respect for the people they are working around. But then I guess you have to be a respectful person anyway.

Aries Don't make personal changes just yet. Give yourself time to figure out a plan that will ensure your success. Acting in haste will set you back.

Taurus Don't trust anyone to handle your responsibilities for you. If you make a change to the way you do things, you'll find it easier to finish what you start.

Gemini Avoid persuasive individuals asking you for too much or trying to guilt you into something you don't want to do. Sign up for something that offers a mental stimulus.

Cancer If you take part in events that broaden your horizons, you will expand your interests and circle of friends. Explore new avenues and consider a makeover or update your image.

Leo You'll be tempted to make a change without giving enough thought to the outcome. Before you make a mistake, consider getting sound advice from someone you trust.

Virgo You'll be drawn into something that isn't a good fit. Listen to people's opinions, ask questions and consider what's best for you before you agree to get involved.

Libra Live and learn. By getting involved in a course or taking on a motivational challenge, you will discover someone or something you want to pursue.

Scorpio You will need lots of information to make the right decision, so find it! Know your limitations and don't fold under pressure. Walk away from anyone looking for a fight.

Sagittarius You are smart, energetic and capable of fending for yourself, so don't let someone take advantage of you by passing on an exaggerated offer that isn't likely to pan out.

Capricorn You've got the willpower, discipline and wherewithal to bring about change that will improve your life. Don't let someone from your past lead you astray or cause you any distress.

Aquarius Make changes at home that will expand your interests. A space you can set aside for something you enjoy doing will motivate you to turn a hobby into a home business.

Pisces Let your emotions lead the way, even if someone is difficult to deal with. If you dig into a pending problem, someone will disclose the information you need to move forward. EUGENIA LAST

The horror hit of the summer arrives this weekend. ALL PHOTOS A24

How 'Hereditary' became the unlikely horror hit of 2018

Writer and director Ari Aster talks us through his supernatural nightmare.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

"Hereditary" is destined to be one of the summer's most-talked-about movies.

The creepy supernatural horror has been the chatter of Tinseltown since it premiered at Sundance in January, while the hysterical response to its trailer earlier this year and its release during the height of the summer blockbuster season, mean big things are expected of the film.

No one is more surprised by the hype than writer and director Ari Aster, who recently told Metro, "If anything, I wanted to make a film that was anti-mainstream.

"I wanted to make an existential horror film ,that was very difficult and very alienating," he says. "My primary aim was to upset the audience on a very deep level.

"So I have been shocked to see that this film has been funneled out into the mainstream, and that the mainstream appears to be embracing it," he adds. "Although we can't say that because it hasn't been released. So far, only a very niche audience has embraced it."

Because it's his first feature film, Ari has followed the hype for "Hereditary" rather closely. Although he admits that his closeness to the project makes him "wonder if it feels bigger than it actually is."

There's a good reason why the hysteria surrounding "Hereditary" is so huge, though, as it looks utterly terrifying. Plus, it helps that critics have been raving for months about the film, which revolves around Annie Graham (Toni Collette) delving into her family's past in the wake of her mother's death and finding some terrifying secrets that could affect the future of everyone she holds dear.

"Hereditary" is here to give you nightmares.

Aster's original plan for "Hereditary" was much simpler. "I just wanted to make a film about grief and about trauma, and about the things that scare me," he admits.

While Aster is quick to list off a long list of his horror influences, from "Don't Look Now" to "Rosemary's Baby" to "Let The Right One In" and "The Wailing," he quickly put those films out of his mind, because he wanted to make sure that "Hereditary" had its own unique tone and felt truly evil.

"I wanted the film to feel very sorrowful, to have a funeral tone," Aster says. "And to be a sad family drama about people dealing with unimaginable loss. On another level I wanted the film to feel evil. I wanted to take the character's pain seriously."

More importantly, though, Aster wanted to make sure that, while the characters in "Hereditary" are being put through hell, the audience can't help but sit there and enjoy their pain.

"But, simultaneously, while the family is suffering the movie is smiling," Aster says. "That's not me smiling. There is a more sinister and sadistic knowing perspective at play. Laughter is important to that. A film without humor is a film wasted. Even if the humor is horrible."

"Hereditary" opens in theaters on Friday.

Olivia Holt and Aubrey Joseph star in Marvel's "Cloak & Dagger." FREEFORM

Next big thing: Why you have to watch Marvel's 'Cloak & Dagger'

The superhero-themed teen drama debuts on Freeform.

ANDREW HUSBAND

Last year, the ever-expanding Marvel cinematic and television universes entered the young adult world for the first time with Hulu's "Runaways." They're about to do it again with "Cloak & Dagger," a new Freeform series developed by "Heroes" and "Daredevil" alum Joe Pokaski. Or at least that's the way it seems, for despite all the publicity's focus on the show's eponymous teenage duo, early reviews indicate that "Cloak & Dagger" is nothing like "Runaways."

What's it about?

Much like its comic book origins, "Cloak & Dagger" follows Tandy Bowen (Olivia Holt) and Tyrone Johnson (Aubrey Joseph), two teenagers from disparate backgrounds whose chance meeting reveals their unique power sets. Tandy can emit daggers of light from her hands, while Tyrone has the ability to envelope others in darkness and, whenever necessary, transport them and himself from one location to another. As they fall in love, they learn about a shared tragedy.

Why you should watch it

On the one hand, the many arms of Marvel practically necessitate that anyone who wants to keep up with the conversation should at least check out whatever the latest property is. On the other hand, that Pokaski is behind "Cloak & Dagger" should attract everyone's attention, regardless of their opinion of superhero properties. Yes, he cut his teeth with the breakout series "Heroes" and filed them further with Netflix's "Daredevil," but he also did WGN's "Underground."

Meet the cast

Seeing as how "Cloak & Dagger" is literally centered on two protagonists, you would think the production would have cast the two best leads it could find. That's exactly what Pokaski and his team did with Olivia Holt ("Kickin' It," "Status Update") and Aubrey Joseph ("The Night Of," "Run All Night"). Both have done plenty of television and film, but "Cloak & Dagger" is their first opportunity to shine. And judging by reviewers' reactions so far, Holt and Joseph succeed. Other notable cast members include veteran actor J. D. Evermore, "Power Rangers" alum Emma Lahana and "E.R." and "Mr. Robot" star Gloria Reuben.

How to watch

"Cloak & Dagger" premieres Thursday, at 8 p.m. ET on Freeform. After that, already-aired episodes will be available to stream on demand or in the Freeform GO app.

There's a giant leather jacket on display in Philly

Here's where it is.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

If you haven't been to the Fabric Workshop and Museum (1214 Arch St.) lately, experiencing Ursula von Rydingsvard: The Contour of Feeling is a great opportunity to do so. One of the most influential sculptors around, Rydingsvard is best known for her cedar sculpture work, but gets into leather through a special collaboration with the Fabric Museum and Workshop.

The result is PODERWAĆ, a giant leather jacket that stands nearly 11 feet tall, made from 193 deconstructed leather jackets. This is von Rydingsvard's first piece in leather and is probably one of the most memorable pieces in the exhibition, especially if you're a leather fan.

Susan Lubowsky Talbott, executive director of the Fabric Workshop and Museum, gives additional background on the piece in a press release.

"The giant leather jacket entitled PODERWAĆ, which resulted from von Rydingsvard's residency, exemplifies the unexpected outcome of an artist being given ample time and resources to experiment. The jacket took almost 900 hours of sewing; when I commented that there was something wonderfully tortured about this work, Ursula's response was 'good—that's what I wanted!'"

If you'd like to get up close and personal with PODERWAĆ, the exhibition runs through August 26, 2018 at the Fabric Workshop and Museum.

For more information, visit: fabricworkshopandmuseum.org.

EAT LIKE AN INSIDER

Chef Kenneth Bush tells us where to eat in Philly ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

Find out where to get the best jerk chicken in West Philly.

Chef Kenneth Bush got his start cooking at age eight, growing up in Mount Vernon, New York.

"I started cooking with my mother, who cooked the Southern food of her family as well as some Italian-American cuisine taught to her by her college roommate," he says. "Cooking for people has always been my way of showing love and affection."

His first job in the industry was at McDonald's.

"I worked there as a teenager. It was a great experience because it really did show me how complicated running a restaurant can be. I worked in the kitchen and on registers, and even did dishwashing and floor maintenance, and because of this, I really got to see all aspects of the restaurant."

Bush then went off to Yale University to earn a degree in American studies, and it wasn't until after college that he started cooking professionally. In 2009, he began working at Bistrot La Minette, commencing his French culinary training. In 2012, Bush went to Garces Trading Company to work as a sous chef and then returned to Bistrot La Minette as executive chef in 2014.

For this edition of "Eat like an Insider," Bush takes us to his favorite place for jerk chicken in West Philly as well as a sushi spot that's so hot it doesn't need signage.

Best late-night meal?
If I am hungry after work, I often go to Southwark (701 S. 4th St.). Chris and Marina [the owners] put out a late-night menu that hits everything you are looking for — small plate appetizers, steak tartare, charcuterie, a delicious burger and some of the best cocktails in the city. I always get the mussels escabeche.

Best meal under $10?
Little Delicious (4821 Woodland Ave.) is my go-to under $10 spot. It's a small Jamaican restaurant in West Philly, and the food is worth the drive no matter where you are. The small meal for $9 is plenty for lunch or dinner, with leftovers to spare. The jerk chicken is my personal favorite, and you get a choice of sides. I always get rice and beans, cabbage and dumplings.

Best hidden food gem?
Royal Izakaya (780 S. 2nd St.). The atmosphere is fun and the food is one of a kind in this city. I end up eating there once a month, and I don't usually repeat dine since there are so many new restaurants to try. They are usually busy, but because it's in a small neighborhood, has no signage and they don't take reservations, you can always get in. My favorite dish is the kaarage chicken wings. The wings are by far the best in the city — extra crispy and with a chili vinegar sauce that is out of this world.

Ambra serves up some delicious pasta dishes.

Best place to dine alone?
Sate Kampar (1837 E. Passyunk Ave.). Their coffee bar is a great place to post up with an iPad or a book, and have a great dinner by yourself. Its BYO, so bring a flask! Get the meat skewers, but make sure you try the mee hoon goreng bungkus (fried rice vermicelli with egg) and the ku-mah's achat (pickled vegetables).

Place you always take or recommend for out-of-towners?
Friday, Saturday, Sunday (261 S. 21st St.). The restaurant is so beautiful, and it's one of the best meals I have had this year in Philly. Chad is producing some of the best food in Philly, and I always want to show that off to out-of-towners. His sweetbread katsu is my favorite bite in Philly right now.

Go-to date spot?
Ambra (705 S. 4th St.). It's beautiful, cozy and romantic. The menu changes frequently, but all of the pastas and crudos are always exceptional. Great place for an intimate date.

Best place to catch up with friends?
Royal Boucherie (52 S. 2nd St.) is a great place to catch up with friends. The booths are so cozy, and the drinks will help keep the conversation flowing. Don't miss their escargot, but get one of the sourdough boules to help soak up all that chartreuse butter.

Most Instagrammable restaurant?
Marigold Kitchen (501 S. 45th St.). Tim, Andrew and their new chef de cuisine, Eric, are all great chefs, and put out some of the most delicious and beautiful food in the city. The menu changes a lot so it's impossible to have a favorite. JENNIFER LOGUE

The Andy Warhol Bridge is one of the three "sister bridges". JP DIROLL PHOTOGRAPHY

Find out what came 'Before Pop' at Pittsburgh's Andy Warhol Museum

The artist's hometown museum will be exhibiting his early works all summer long.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Andy Warhol, one of Pittsburgh's most celebrated artists, also happens to be one of the world's greatest innovators of modern art and all things "cool." Since the 'Burgh was his place of birth, it is also home to the Andy Warhol Museum.

"The Andy Warhol Museum is one of the most requested attractions by the journalists and press tours we host, both domestic and international, regardless of the focus of their visit," said Craig Davis, president and CEO of VisitPITTSBURGH. "Andy Warhol is an icon and is hugely responsible for making Pittsburgh such a world-renown destination for arts and culture."

In association with the Carnegie Museums, this seven-story museum displays the largest collection of his artwork, archival materials, and is one of the most finely curated and comprehensive single artist museums in the world. For any Warhol fan, The Warhol Museum is a must-see and the perfect destination for lovers of modern art.

"When visitors come to the museum they are exposed to a personal, much more intimate, perspective on Warhol—one that you wouldn't find at another museum," says Jessica Beck, Milton Fine Curator of Art. "Visitors get to see that Warhol was putting out an enormous amount of work during his lifetime, and that within each decade he had different ideas and approaches to art making that was not just about Marilyn Monroe, Campbell's Soup and the Disaster paintings that he made in the 1960s. He also made film, photography, still-life paintings, portraits, abstract paintings, and large-scale religious works.. There are many different sides to Warhol that you can uncover when you come here."

Andy Warhol, Shoe and Leg ("December Shoe"), ca. 1956, The Andy Warhol Museum, Pittsburgh, THE ANDY WARHOL FOUNDATION FOR THE VISUAL ARTS, INC.

Before the pop artist, there was the adman

Most people know about Warhol's work through his giant pop art odes to brands like Campbell's soup, his youth-generation films from the '60s or even as manager of the Velvet Underground during his New York Factory days. But a lot of his fans may be unfamiliar with his work before this time. That is why The Andy Warhol Museum is currently presenting a new exhibition of the collection, "Adman: Warhol Before Pop" which displays Warhol's award-winning work as a commercial artist in New York's advertising industry in the 1950s. Thinking about him mixing it up with the Mad Men of the day is an interesting enough image — but his art spoke for itself in the work he was commissioned to do early on in his career as a young artist.

"The exciting thing about Warhol's 1950s work is that once you know the layers and the dimensions to his first decade, you can have a better understanding of the rest of his career," explains Beck. "Within that first decade," she adds, "there are so many layers to his practice. There is a really sensitive eye for design color and skill. There is also a daring presentation of his sexuality, in a way. He is creating a feminine space in his work by taking on feminine products like perfume bottles, cosmetics, shoes and jewelry."

This exhibit at The Warhol Museum will culminate in a special gala titled "Window Dressing: An Evening of Fashion from the Eons Archives" on Friday, July 13 at 7 p.m. The event will bring alive the spirit of Warhol's 1950s with cocktails, music and even models posing in period-specific clothing from the Eons Fashion Antique curated by owner Richard Parsakian. Many of the pieces in Parsakians archives include clothing and fashion accessories that Warhol had created ads for during this time period. On the cash bar menu, there will be special cocktails created by the Ladies United for the Preservation of Endangered Cocktails (LUPEC) inspired by drinks that Andy's mother, Julia Warhola, used to make. Fifties attire isn't mandatory to get into this party, but the organizers of the event strongly encourage visitors to try and look the part.

Wright with big challenge of full rebuild

The Villanova head coach is eager to tackle the challenge.

JON MARKS
sports@metro.us

We know he can recruit. We know he can motivate. And we know no one dresses better. But now we find out just how good a coach Jay Wright is.

Sure, he's won two national championships in the last three years at Villanova, including a 2018 campaign in which the 36-4 Wildcats won all six tournament games by double digits. But when you've got a stable full of thoroughbreds like the consensus Player of the Year Jalen Brunson, Mikal Bridges, big men Eric Paschall and Omari Spellman and super sub Donte DiVincenzo, sometimes the best strategy is letting them do their thing and simply staying out of their way.

That won't be the case next season, however. Even though both had a season of eligibility left it was expected all along that Brunson and Bridges would be NBA bound.

But the departures of DiVincenzo and Spellman. weren't as expected. Such sudden departures happen all the time at the University of Kentucky, where John Calipari prides himself on how quickly he can get his players ready for the pros. But for Wright, whose team's mantra has always been to simply play "Villanova basketball," — work hard, play together, respect your opponent and let the score take care of itself — this is uncharted territory.

Yet he seems eager to take on the challenge. "We're going to have a lot of work to do," said Wright after Spellman made it official he — like DiVincenzo — would be hiring an agent and staying in the draft. "It was bound to happen some year.

"We'd been very fortunate in the past where guys had decided to stay. It turned out that this was the best move for all of these guys. We're so happy for them, but now it's time to build it up again, which is exciting," he continued.

It's not like 'Nova's cupboard has been left quite as bare as Old Mother Hubbard's. But clearly Wright faces his biggest test since 2012 when the Wildcats, three years removed from a trip to the Final Four, staggered home with a record of 13-19.

Not only did Wright weather that storm, going 20-14 and 29-5 in the ensuing years, but since dropping their last two games in 2013 it hasn't happened since. During that span, they've gone an astounding 165-21 and won two NCAA titles.

That's the legacy Paschall, oft-injured senior guard Phil Booth and the rest of the Wildcats will try to maintain, knowing the rest of the Big East undoubtedly sees the coming season as a chance for payback after so many years being Villanova's victims.

Wright, who passed Al Severance to become Villanova's winningest coach just before the Big East Tournament, was already anticipating he'd need reinforcements. He just didn't expect so many.

"We really have just two proven players returning," said the 56-year-old Wright, who will have to force feed sophomores Collin Gillespie, Dhamir Cosby-Roundtree and Jermaine Samuels, who played sparingly last season, into the lineup with his incoming freshmen and grad transfer student Joe Cremo.

"That's just what a young team is. We've had four or five years in a row that we knew we had a good team coming back. You knew who the guys were and you just had to get them to be the best they could be," he added.

"Now, we have a lot of question marks. It gives us a different type of coaching. It's going to be a challenge."

Jay Wright is embraced after winning his second national championship. GETTY IMAGES

Children are needed for a sleep research study

Children between the ages of 6 and 12 years are needed for a study that will help us better understand sleep in children.

We are looking for healthy children who do not snore.

The study involves 4 nights in our sleep lab and 3 daytime visits to the hospital over a 12-month period approximately. During this study, nothing will hurt your child and no needles will be used. An adult must stay with the child overnight.

We offer reimbursement for expenses.

For further information, please call Mary Anne Cornaglia at (267) 426-5748. Leave a message and we will return your call.
Please state your name and contact number.

Principal investigator: Ignacio Tapia, M.D.
Address: The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia Sleep Center
Civic Center Blvd. and 34th Street
Philadelphia, PA 19104

Cocaine Research Study

Having problems related to your cocaine use?

Research studies at UPenn are trying to understand the brain's role in relapse.

Studies use brain imaging and may also test an investigational medication for preventing relapse.

Most imaging studies require an initial inpatient stay.

Compensation is provided.

VICTORY-1

OSTEOARTHRITIS

KNEE PAIN CAN BE DEFEATING

BUT VICTORY CAN BE YOURS.

The VICTORY-1 study is a 52-week clinical trial examining an ultra-purified form of capsaicin - a naturally-occurring compound found in chili peppers - and its potential to provide extended relief from osteoarthritis knee pain with a single local injection. If you are between 40 and 95 years of age, have knee osteoarthritis with moderate to severe pain, and have experienced difficulty managing your knee osteoarthritis pain, you may be eligible to participate. Speak with a member of the staff to learn if the VICTORY-1 study may be an option for you.
